Nadja By Andre Breton

Nadja, the second book published by André Breton, is one of the iconic works of the French surrealist movement. It begins with the question "Who am I?" It is based on Breton's actual interactions with a young woman, Nadja, over the course of ten days, and is presumed to be a semi-autobiographical description of his relationship with a mad patient of Pierre Janet. The book's non-linear structure is grounded in reality by references to other Paris surrealists such as Louis Aragon

Deux jours plus tard, Nadja donne à Breton un dessin, le premier qu'il voit : une étoile noire à cinq branches, un masque carré, ces deux éléments reliés par un trait en pointillés où se rencontrent un crochet et un cœur également en pointillé ; à droite, Nadja a dessiné une bourse et écrit, au-dessus, quatre mots : L'Attente, L'Envie, L'Amour, L'Argent.

Nadja (André Breton) — Wikipédia

André Robert Breton was a French writer and poet. He is known best as the co-founder, leader, principal theorist and chief apologist of surrealism. His writings include the first Surrealist Manifesto of 1924, in which he defined surrealism as "pure psychic automatism". Along his role as leader of the surrealist movement he is the author of celebrated books such as "Nadja" and "L'Amour fou". Those activities combined with his critical and theoretical work for writing and the plastic arts ...

The second part is the actual Nadja story and it's quite interesting to read, though it ends too abruptly. In conclusion, the author shares his views on psychiatry of the time and this part was the most interesting to me. Andre Breton served in neurological ward during WWI and his perspective is valuable on this subject.

Nadja by André Breton. I am reading Nadja by André Breton. My husband has left the house. I am sitting up in bed, on top of the covers, with my shoes on. It's quiet, and my hands feel dry, like pages. I turn a page and make a fist, press my nails into my palm. The result is four half-moons that look like unstressed syllables, with the ...

Kristen Iskandrian, "Nadja by André Breton" / Memorious 10

Breton, though dealing with abstract concepts, presents nineteen twenties Paris as a magical world in which the author/third person narrator meets a younger woman named Nadja, an unruly waif of pale complexion who attaches herself to our main character, an older, married man, and then draws him into her surprisingly magical web.
